AP[®] United States Government and Politics

Directions for Administration

The AP United States Government and Politics Exam is 2 hours and 25 minutes in length and consists of a multiple-choice section and a free-response section.

- The 45-minute multiple-choice section contains 60 questions and accounts for 50 percent of the final grade.
- The 100-minute free-response section contains 4 questions and accounts for 50 percent of the final grade.

Students should be given a 10-minute warning prior to the end of each section of the exam. A 10-minute break should be provided after Section I is completed.

The actual AP Exam is administered in one session. Students will have the most realistic experience if a complete morning or afternoon is available to administer this practice exam. If a schedule does not permit one time period for the entire practice exam administration, it would be acceptable to administer Section I one day and Section II on a subsequent day.

Many students wonder whether or not to guess the answers to the multiple-choice questions about which they are not certain. It is improbable that mere guessing will improve a score. However, if a student has some knowledge of the question and is able to eliminate one or more answer choices as wrong, it may be to the student's advantage to answer such a question.

- The use of calculators, or any other electronic devices, is not permitted during the exam.
- It is suggested that the practice exam be completed using a pencil for Section I and a pen for Section II to simulate an actual administration.
- Teachers will need to provide paper for the students to write their free-response answers. Teachers should provide directions to the students indicating how they wish the responses to be labeled so the teacher will be able to associate the student's response with the question the student intended to answer.
- Remember that students are not allowed to remove any materials, including scratch work, from the testing site.

Question 1

6 points

Part (a): 3 points

One point is earned for each correct description of a factor affecting voter participation in elections.

Acceptable descriptions include:

- The voter registration requirement diminishes voter participation by requiring citizens to register prior to an election.
- Lack of penalties for not voting diminishes voter participation because there are no legal consequences for failing to vote.
- Long ballots dissuade voters from voting for all offices. Frequent elections dissuade voters from going to the polls.

Part (b): 3 points

One point is earned for each correct description of a factor affecting voter behavior in presidential elections.

Acceptable descriptions include:

- Race: Whites are more likely to vote Republican; African Americans and Hispanics/Latinos are more likely to vote Democratic.
- Party identification: Voters generally vote with the party with which they are identified.
- Geographic regions: Several patterns exist; for example, the South tends to vote Republican, the Pacific Coast tends to vote Democratic, and the Rocky Mountain region tends to vote Republican.

A score of zero (0) is earned for an attempted answer that earns no points.

A score of dash (—) is earned for a blank or off-task answer.

Question 2

6 points

Part (a): 2 points

One point is earned for each correct explanation of how the “power of the purse” and the appointment confirmation process can restrict presidential power.

Acceptable explanations include:

- Power of the purse: Congress controls appropriations. The president may request funding, but Congress can deny such requests.
- Appointment confirmation: The president can appoint officials, but the Senate can reject those appointments.

Note: In each case above, the student must explain how or why each limits the power of the institution in question.

Part (b): 2 points

One point is earned for each correct explanation of how the president’s power as commander-in-chief and executive privilege can restrict congressional power.

Acceptable explanations include:

- President’s power as commander-in-chief: Congress may have the power to declare war, but the president is commander-in-chief and can therefore deploy troops as he or she sees fit.
- Executive privilege: Congress has the powers of oversight and investigation, but the president can refuse to disclose conversations that he or she had with the White House staff.

Part (c): 2 points

One point is earned for each correct explanation of how enforcement of judicial rulings and constitutional amendments can restrict congressional power.

Acceptable explanations include:

- Enforcement of judicial rulings: Courts can issue rulings, but they have no enforcement mechanism to ensure that the rulings are carried out. The courts depend upon others for enforcement.
- Constitutional amendments: Courts can interpret the Constitution, but Congress and the states can pass constitutional amendments that the courts are obligated to follow.

A score of zero (0) is earned for an attempted answer that earns no points.

A score of dash (—) is earned for a blank or off-task answer.

Question 3

5 points

Part (a): 3 points

One point is earned for explaining how each specified characteristic of an interest group can enhance its influence over Congress.

Acceptable explanations include:

- Financial resources can enhance the influence of an interest group because money enables interest groups to campaign, make monetary contributions, buy independent television time, and employ a large staff.
- Expertise enhances influence because members of Congress will pay attention to and respect what members of the interest group have to say.
- Size enhances influence because the larger the group, the greater the ability to deliver votes and other resources. The larger the group, the greater the potential for fundraising and campaign contributions to influence members of Congress.

Part (b): 2 points

One point is earned for each of two identifications of the ways in which Congress has attempted to limit the influence of interest groups.

Acceptable identifications may include:

- Registration requirement for lobbyists.
- Limitations on campaign contributions.
- Disclosure of campaign contributions.
- Limitations on independent expenditures: for example, an issue advocacy ad cannot explicitly endorse a candidate.
- Restrictions on former members of Congress: for example, a two-year “cooling-off” period before the former member can lobby Congress.

A score of zero (0) is earned for an attempted answer that earns no points.

A score of dash (—) is earned for a blank or off-task answer.

Question 4

5 points

Part (a): 1 point

One point is earned for defining a balanced budget, noting the salient point that a budget is balanced when federal spending equals federal income.

Part (b): 1 point

One point is earned for defining federal entitlements.

An acceptable definition includes:

- A federal entitlement is a federal program that guarantees a specific level of benefits to persons (or other entities) who meet requirements set by law, such as Social Security, farm price supports, or unemployment benefits.
- Reference may also be made to “eligibility” (a person receives an entitlement if he or she meets certain requirements) and “mandate” (spending that is required by law).

Part (c): 2 points

One point is earned for identifying a federal entitlement.

Federal entitlements include:

- Medicaid
- Medicare
- Social Security
- Veteran’s Administration programs
- Unemployment programs
- Food stamps
- Federal employee and military retirement plans

Note: This list is not exhaustive.

One point is earned for explaining how entitlements are a barrier to the federal government achieving a balanced budget.

Acceptable explanations for impediments:

- Congress has no discretion on how much money to appropriate.
- Since Congress must spend money on entitlement programs, it has insufficient discretion to bring about a balanced budget.
- Since entitlements account for more than two-thirds of the federal budget, Congress is not left with much to cut in order to bring about a balanced budget.

Note: The two parts of this question are independent of each other. The student may get the first part correct but miss the second part (or vice versa). The student may also “double dip” by identifying an entitlement and then explaining how that entitlement may be a barrier to the federal government achieving a balanced budget.

Part (d): 1 point

One point is earned for describing a consequence of large budget deficits.

Acceptable descriptions include:

- There is a large amount of interest paid on the debt.
- Deferring payment puts a burden on future generations.

A score of zero (0) is earned for an attempted answer that earns no points.

A score of dash (—) is earned for a blank or off-task answer.
